The result of the Quebec elections is still in dispute, with both parties claiming a majority. It is said the Ross government will not resign, but will meet the legislature. It is also stated that a round robin has been signed by a majority of the members of the new legislature and been presented to the lieutenant-governor asking him to call upon the opposition leader to form a government. Recounts will be had in several constituencies. There is a good deal of talk about the possibility of the federal elections also being brought on immediately.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 22, 1886.

The Czar was so uneasy and suspicious yesterday that he killed a subaltern whom he feared was going to draw a weapon on him.

Reported that the Canadian Pacific seek to acquire the Northern and North-Western railroads of Ontario with the Callendar extension. This would give them control of all approaches to the North-West.

The elections in Chicoutimi, the last county to hear from in the province of Quebec took place yesterday. Only two polling places so far heard from, and they give the blue candidate the majority. The general situation in Quebec is unchanged. The leading members of the liberal party have gone to Quebec to investigate the situation.

EDMONTON BULLETIN, OCT. 23, 1886.

THE MAIL ROBBER.

Complaints have frequently been made as to the arbitrary administration of law in the North-West. Although substantial injustice has not been frequently it has sometimes been done. A most noticeable case of arbitrary action and possible consequent injustice is that of the alleged Prince Albert mail robber lately sentenced at Regina to fourteen years penitentiary. Of course crime must be punished. Admitting the alleged criminal's guilt the sentence is not too severe. It is necessary that the crime of mail robbery in this country should have exemplary punishment. But it is above all things necessary that the real criminal, not an innocent man, shall suffer. In order that the criminal shall be discovered it is necessary that every person charged with the crime shall have the fullest opportunity of proving his innocence. This the man Garnett was not allowed. The crime was committed in the Saskatchewan judicial district. Garnett resided in the midst of a settlement near the seat of the court for that district. There the witnesses for the crown resided, and there in common justice he should have been tried. There he would have had every opportunity to procure witnesses as to character and social standing at the time the deed was committed; and if really innocent perhaps circumstantial or more positive evidence to that effect. True the judge of the district was absent, but he is paid for being in his place, not for allowing the course of law to be delayed or perverted. Garnett was taken to Regina, two hundred miles from where he had a right to be tried and where alone he could procure witnesses, to where he was entirely a stranger and where public feeling on the subject of the mail robbery had full sway. How important this right of being tried where the crime is committed is held to be may be judged from the fact that in other countries a change of the place of trial is only allowed for the most weighty reasons, none of which had a bearing on this case. How important it was to Garnett is seen from his having only one witness from the South Branch at the trial. Had he demanded more they might have been compelled to attend. But they might object to going 200 miles to give evidence on some apparently minor point, which at the same time might be most necessary as a link in the chain of defence, while they would not have objected to going the few miles to Prince Albert to tell what they knew whether much or little. There is always danger in an unwilling witness. Had the evidence at the trial been conclusive it would have mattered little to the question of substantial justice whether the prisoner had the opportunity to procure witnesses or not, but it was anything but that. Of the witnesses examined, Art the mail driver identified Garnett at the preliminary examination and at the trial. Betts a passenger could not identify him at the preliminary examination but did so at the trial. Fiddler a passenger was not at the preliminary and could not identify him at the trial. Thompson of Swanston's party knew Garnett before, did not recognize him at the time of the robbery, but identified him at the trial. Two men making hay south of Humboldt swore positively that Garnett was not the man who visited their camp, who was doubtless the mail robber, and whom the mail driver who had seen him there swore was Garnett. A neighbor of Garnett's, a crown witness, testified that he had seen Garnett's government receipt for land which he had taken up while absent from home at the time of the robbery, and that he could not have taken up the land and been at the scene of the robbery during his absence. No trace of anything taken from the mail was found by the authorities, but during the trial a parcel was received from Winnipeg containing some of the registered matter that had been taken, with the statement that Garnett was not the guilty man. Garnett was shown to be a man of excellent reputation and in circumstances the reverse of such as would lead him to take the risk of committing robbery. The evidence in the case may have justified conviction, but only so in default of any defence being made. Had the trial been held where witnesses in defence were available, their not being brought forward would have tended to show that no defence was possible. But not so when it was held where such witnesses could only be procured with the greatest difficulty if at all. Of course Garnett may be guilty, and if so he should be punished, but that he was not accorded a fair opportunity of proving his innocence is beyond a doubt. That the authorities in the North-West had ample reason to desire a conviction in this important case the large number of outrages this summer of which the perpetrators are yet undetected is witness; but where their anxiety to secure a conviction prevents them from according a prisoner a fair trial individual members of society have more to dread from them than from ordinary law-breakers. In proportion as doubt is thrown upon the proper balancing of the scales of justice so the reputation of the authorities will be lowered, no matter which end of the balance is for the time heaviest.

TREATY payments were made in the Peace hills agency as follows: Sharphead's band of Stonies at Wolf creek on the 19th and Samson's, Ermine Skin's, Muddy Bull's and Bob Tail's bands of Crees on Samson's reserve on the 20th inst.

At a meeting of the officers and teachers of the Methodist Sabbath school held in the church on Tuesday evening last it was decided that they would adopt telegraph time which is about three quarters of an hour slower than mill time. Sabbath school at 3 o'clock p.m.

THE Pincher creek correspondent of the Regina Journal says: "Most of the 'home guard' who were hitched on to the Rocky Mountain Rangers have taken up their land warrants in this district and are settling on their land grants this fall." In contrast to this case of home guards getting scrip, the Edmonton volunteer company got no scrip and the Edmonton home guards no pay.

A COUPLE of specimens of rock from the Haney mines were shown to the BULLETIN this week by Thos. Henderson, Mr. Haney's partner. One piece was of a light reddish color something like brick but of closer texture. In it could be seen with the naked eye small shining particles which under a strong microscope took the appearance of lumps of melted silver. The other piece was of a compact jet black stone, scrapings of which also showed what appeared to be silver under the glass.

REPORTED that measles are making serious ravages in the Lac la Biche settlement. A number of grown people, chiefly women, have died as well as children. The sickness being in every house, the fishery which is now commencing cannot be attended to and great destitution will certainly result this winter. The disease is not quite so bad at Whitefish lake and Victoria, but is bad enough even there. The treaty payments in the Victoria Indian agency have been postponed on account of the prevalence of the sickness.

Now that the trail between Edmonton and Calgary is defined—in regard to the greater part of which there was no probability of dispute or inconvenience for many years—it seems strange that the main trails through this settlement, which are continually in dispute and being interfered with, should be left severely alone, and the surveyor of the Bow river trail be sent to define the claims of an abandoned settlement at Beaver lake instead of attending to the requirements of the much larger and more important settlements at and around Edmonton. It is two years since similar work was done in Prince Albert, and nearly a year since the trails so surveyed were proclaimed permanent highways by the federal government.

MESSRS. Smith, Ross, Burleigh and Coghlan arrived from the Haney mines on Tuesday evening. Their trip was made on the report of the discovery of placer diggings by F. M. Juneau. Both Smith and Burleigh are practical miners, the latter having had a longer experience on this river than any other man on it. He prospected the place where Juneau claimed to have found gold and declares there is not a color. Certainly there is no gold that can be secured by ordinary process in that or any of the many other similar places where Burleigh prospected. On the way down the party passed Juneau also on his way down with his outfit, having given up the project. Burleigh thinks Juneau was deceived in his test by using quicksilver that had been used before, and which had retained a portion of the gold with which it had been amalgamated, but which was squeezed out and secured when he made the test. None of the party have had much experience in quartz mining, but they have a poor opinion of the prospects in that locality.
